Jacques Guinaudeau's great great grand-father, Henri Greloud, purchased this 4.5 hectares vineyard bloc at the hamlet of Lafleur on Pomerol's plateau in 1872. After renewing the vineyard and constructing the house and cellars, he baptized this new cru using the historical name of the plot: Château Lafleur. A brilliant, prophetic-like idea, Henri had doubtlessly imagined the wines that would emerge here one day. In this almost perfect square of a "garden-vineyard" many a great millésimes were born, such as 1947 and 1982.

In 1985 Sylvie and Jacques took the reins of this mythical cru; In 2002 they become the sole proprietor of Château Lafleur, after acquiring it from cousins, together with our three children: Baptiste, Clara and Noémie. Baptiste and Julie joined the enterprise at the beginning of the new millennium, both carrying the same passion for subtleties, precision and finesse, which have always been the Lafleur signature. With the passing of years the little team has grown bigger and younger, today consisting of fifteen persons who employ all of their enthusiasm in the service of the different vineyards of Société Civile du Château Lafleur.

Lafleur holds a unique and rare position in the Bordeaux landscape: Above all they are vigneron, present throughout the year in the vineyards and cellars, their goal is to understand and work with nature and climate in every way possible.
