NOVEMBER 2016

Fleshy and layered, with crushed blueberry, açai berry and plum flavors that have melded together, carried by a dense but rounded structure. The long finish lets sweet tobacco and dark fruit cake notes check in. A loamy tug at the end keeps this honest. — J.M.

DECEMBER 2016

This slowly gave up notes of ripe dark fruits, lavender, hints of minerality and damp earth, as well as medium to full-bodied richness, a terrific mid-palate and ripe, sweet tannin... Will drink well for a decade. — J.D.

Vanilla and baking spices frame blueberry and plum fruit in this rich, velvety offering. It's slightly fuller and bolder than Colombo's 2014 La Louvée... Drink now–2030. - J.C.

APRIL 2017

Smoke-accented black and blue fruits, spicecake, cola and licorice... mineral-accented cassis and blueberry flavors show impressive depth and pick up a suave floral quality with aeration. Displays excellent detail and lift on the youthfully tannic, persistent finish, which features echoing blue fruit and licorice notes. — J.R.
