FEBRUARY 2015

Packed with dark plum, blackberry and anise notes at the core, laced with bay, sweet tapenade and iron on the finish. This has heft and cut, energy and length. Should cellar well. Best from 2016 through 2022.— J.M.

MARCH 2014

Sexy dark berry preserve and floral pastille scents are complemented by suggestions of woodsmoke, licorice and black pepper. Round and expansive in the mouth, offering appealingly sweet blueberry and cherry-cola flavors and a touch of bitter chocolate. Closes supple and long, with lingering smokiness and smooth tannins. — J.R.

DECEMBER 2014

The 2012 Cornas les Terres Brulees is a soft, sexy and forward effort that gives up lots of truffle, wild herb, peppered meat and sweet darker styled fruit. It's a hedonistic, well-made Cornas to drink over the coming decade. — J.D.
